

This week’s election in Massachusetts was a shot heard round the world, and I hope that the Democrats are listening. The American people have spoken loud and clear – they don’t want a government takeover of health care. It’s time for Congress to do what the people have asked for – start over on health care and put commonsense and fiscal responsibility back in the process.